STEP 2
Where does your company do business globally?
List the countries where your company has one or more owned subsidiaries (incorporated entities) outside of your home country.

STEP 3
Where does your company have a physical presence?
Indicate whether your company has locally domiciled “bricks and mortar” operations in each country listed in Step 2.

STEP 4
What is the nature of your company's exposure in these countries?
For each country you listed in Step 2, indicate the most recent annual revenue, total assets, and employee count. These measures may be key factors in helping you decide where to purchase locally admitted coverage.

STEP 5
What potential D&O liability risks does your company face in these countries?
For each country listed in Step 2, indicate whether the local subsidiaries (incorporated entities) have executive officers or local boards of directors composed of:
- Outside directors,
- Local executive officers, or
- Parent company executives serving as local directors or officers.
"Yes" answers indicate a higher priority need for locally admitted D&O insurance.

D&O Liability Risk Assessment Guide

Does my company need locally admitted D&O liability insurance?

Important considerations for multinational D&O liability coverage.
Countries around the world are stepping up their regulation of companies that do business within their borders. Keeping pace with constantly evolving, increasingly complex local-country regulations is difficult. “Worldwide” coverage in a domestic policy may not provide adequate local coverage or comply with local regulations, thereby leaving a local insured without the desired coverage. Noncompliance can result in unwanted outcomes, such as:

- Prohibition against payment of insurance proceeds on behalf of directors and officers in the local country,
- Potential penalties and fines against local entities, and
- Corporate taxes resulting from inter-company transfers of insurance proceeds.
